Contents Overview

Primitive Accumulation and the New Zealand Dairy Industry

MATTHEW WYNYARD

A history of primitive accumulation and the New Zealand dairy industry. The fifth National government and the enclosure and degradation of freshwater commons as the latest chapter in this long history.

Māori Mārx

SIMON BARBER

Mining the late work of Marx for its intersections with te ao Māori. Whakapapa as a central concept in the development of a Māori Marx.

A Socialist Compass for Aotearoa

DANIELLE WEBB

Extending Erik Olin Wright's socialist compass to make a case for Māori socialism—a socialist economy in which tino rangatiratanga is formative.

Feminine Praxis

CIARA CREMIN

Lacan, Deleuze and Guattari, and the role of femininity in the class struggle. Everyday sartorial interventions as a tactical reification of femininity.

Pity, Hate, Resentment

MURDOCH STEPHENS

How might emotional states be transposed to the political sphere? A psycho-political investigation of hate and its value for Left politics.

Sex Workers' Rights in Aotearoa New Zealand

CATHERINE HEALY

Denise Blake and Amanda Thomas interview Dame Catherine Healy about the history of the New Zealand Prostitutes' Collective.

Deliberative Democracy in Settler-Colonial States

DAVID PARKER

Review of Max Rashbrooke, Government for the Public Good.
Deliberative democracy as a cure for the ills of neoliberalism in a settler-colonial state?

Age of the Void

CHAMSY EL-OJEILI

Review of Marco Revelli, The New Populism. A detailed account of the erosion of the liberal centre and the spread of populism across the United States, United Kingdom, and continental Europe.

Imagining the Feminist Revolution

CAROL HARRINGTON

Review of Victoria Margree, Neglected or Misunderstood. A case for the enduring relevance of Shulamith Firestone.

Censorship and Surveillance in the First World War

ROSS WEBB

Review of Jared Davidson, Dead Letters. A history of state censorship, the New Zealand home front, and undelivered mail during the Great War.

Contributors

SIMON BARBER

Kāti Huirapa, Kāi Tahu, Pākehā. Te Tomokanga fellow in sociology at the University of Auckland. Completed his doctoral thesis, Geometries of Life, with the Centre for Research Architecture at Goldsmiths. Member of Economic and Social Research Aotearoa and Black Study Group.

DENISE BLAKE

Academic and chair of the New Zealand Prostitutes' Collective Board. Denise has been involved in the sex industry in a variety of roles for a number of years and advocates strongly for the rights of sex workers.

CIARA CREMIN

Lectures in sociology at the University of Auckland. She is the author of a number of books including Totaled: Salvaging the Future from the Wreckage of Capitalism (2015) and Man-Made Woman: The Dialectics of Cross-Dressing (2017), both published with Pluto Press.

CHAMSY EL-OJEILI

Senior lecturer in sociology at Victoria University of Wellington.

CAROL HARRINGTON

Senior lecturer in sociology at Victoria University of Wellington. Her research concerns politics and policy on violence against women, sexual violence, and sex work. She teaches courses on the sociology of violence, sexuality, and comparative welfare regimes.

CATHERINE HEALY

Has been with the New Zealand Prostitutes' Collective since its inception in 1987. As the national coordinator she is a vocal lead activist and advocate for sex workers' rights and publishes extensively on sex workers' rights.

DAVID PARKER

Born and raised in Lancashire, England, he came to Aotearoa New Zealand in 1988. He is an activist, writer, and freelance editor and proof-reader. He is co-chair of Kotare Research and Education for Social Change.

MURDOCH STEPHENS

Lecturer in communication at Massey University Wellington, analyst with the South West Baptist Church, and publisher of fiction with Lawrence & Gibson. His most recent book, Doing Our Bit (2018), documents his successful campaign to raise New Zealand's refugee quota.

AMANDA THOMAS

Lecturer in environmental studies at Victoria University of Wellington and researcher for Economic and Social Research Aotearoa.

DANIELLE WEBB

Of Ngāpui, Te Rarawa, and Pākehā descent. Completed an Honours in sociology at Victoria University of Wellington in 2018. Research interests include the Māori economy (traditional and contemporary), the role of capitalism in colonisation, emancipatory politics, and economics.

ROSS WEBB

Historian with an interest in labour history and PhD candidate at Victoria University of Wellington. His thesis traces the relationship between organised labour and politics in New Zealand during the long economic crisis of the 1970s and the neoliberal response to that crisis after 1984.

MATTHEW WYNYARD

Ngāti Maniapoto, Ngāpuhi. Lecturer in sociology at Massey University Manawatū. Prior to being at Massey, Matthew worked as a senior historian in the Office of Treaty Settlements researching Crown breaches of Te Tiriti o Waitangi.
